ABSTRACT

Based on reporting forms from nearly 500 teachers, the booklet identifies effective materials for use with exceptional learners. Contents are divided into various exceptionality areas (educable mentally retarded, trainable mentally retarded, severely and profoundly retarded, communication handicapped, learning disabled, emotionally disturbed, deaf and hearing impaired, blind and visually impaired, physically handicapped, and multiply handicapped) and where appropriate by level (primary, intermediate, etc.) and curricular area (math, reading, etc.). Materials are listed alphabetically by title with the publisher in the appropriate section. A directory of selected publishers is also included. (SBH)

WHAT IS THE TIME PROJECT?

Which special materials are effective special materials? Which materials are worthy of further investigation? What materials are effective in classes similar to mine? These are questions which the TIME Project Report hopefully answers.

The TIME Project is an attempt to identify effective materials for use with exceptional learners. The procedure used was as follows:

- TIME reporting forms were developed and disseminated to directors of special education programs.
- Directors disseminated the forms to teachers who, in turn, completed the forms and returned them to our office.
- The Instructional Materials and Resource Center staff processed the raw data into various exceptionality areas, levels, curricular areas, etc.
- TIME Report was prepared, printed and disseminated back to directors for use by teachers and staff.

The reporting forms asked teachers to list the two most effective materials they were presently using or had used in the past. Teachers were asked to list only the title, publisher, subject area and comments concerning these materials. In addition, space was provided for describing the type and level of class the materials were used with and other information so that reporting teachers could be contacted should others want first-hand information. The reporting form was in postcard format to facilitate rapid completion and return to our office.

The materials listed in the TIME Report represent the collective efforts of hundreds of teachers and thousands of years of classroom teaching experience. For this reason, the TIME Report should be consulted by all special educators involved in the process of selecting special materials.

WHEN SHOULD THE TIME REPORT BE CONSULTED?

The TIME Report can serve as an effective aid in the selection of special materials whenever materials are being considered for purchase. It would be appropriate to consult the TIME Report whenever programs are being initiated or expanded or obsolete materials are being replaced.

HOW TO USE THE TIME PROJECT REPORT

The contents of the TIME Report are separated into various exceptionality areas (EMR, TMR, LD, etc.) and, where appropriate, by level (primary, intermediate, etc.) and curricular area (math, reading, etc.). Thus, to determine which materials have been reported as being effective for the teaching of reading to primary EMR students, one would locate the EMR Primary section and then locate the Reading/Reading Readiness section of this category.

Materials are listed by title and publisher. A directory of selected publishers is also included as part of this project report.

Many materials will have a number in parenthesis following the title. This is a frequency count of how many times the material was reported. Materials reported one time have no number following the title.

Teachers and administrators are encouraged to contact our office if further information is desired concerning any material listed. We also have the capability to quickly identify and locate the person who reported on a given material should others want first-hand information on how material was used, class size, etc. Feel free to contact us if you wish to communicate with the person who reported on any listed program.

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE 1979-80 TIME REPORT

The TIME Project Report provides a unique method of evaluating special materials in that:

- Teachers are reporting on materials they have purchased and use on a daily basis;
- Teachers may report on any materials they feel are effective;
- The possibility of "loaded" sampling techniques is reduced;
- TIME reporting forms are brief and concise to facilitate rapid completion by large numbers of teachers.
- TIME results are compiled and reported to all local administrators for use by teaching staffs, and
- IMRC staff can put teachers requesting information about a certain program in contact with teachers actually using the program.

FINAL COMMENT

We wish to thank the nearly 500 teachers and administrators who contributed to the success of the project. The 1979-80 TIME Project Report is a result of the input from teachers and administrators and is, therefore, their publication. Thanks for the participation.

Comments concerning the effectiveness, utility or desired changes of the Time Project are most welcome. Correspondence should be addressed to:
